As the superforts continued to wreck ruin on the great industry Japan has carefully built up over 100 years, Pres. Harry S. Truman announced the U. S.'s intention to press the fight to the finish.

Calling upon the Japanese to quit and spare their country the destruction visited upon Germany, the President revealed that a force greater than the 3,500,000 men in Europe on V-E Day would be employed in the struggle besides the concentrated might of the navy with its strength in excess of 3,000,000.

Should the enemy elect to carry on the war, President Truman envisaged no easy job, what with the Japs reputed to have 4,000,000 men under arms and millions of military age eligible for service. The enemy still possesses 3,000 combat planes, he said, and Jap industry still is capable of turning out between 1,250 and 1,500 aircraft a month despite bombardments.

Severe Terms

Stripping Germany of all Hitlerian conquests and subjecting the country to absolute Allied authority in every phase of national life, the U. S., British, Russian and French joint military control council, meeting in rubbled Berlin, dictated the most severe terms ever imposed on a defeated power. As U. S. representative, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's presence marked his first appearance in the former German capital following its downfall.

The signing of the declaration did not set final terms, leaving the

Declaring that his residence in Germany as a papal nuncio had acquainted him with the great qualities of its people, Pope Pius XII hoped for the nation's rebirth to new life and dignity after the overthrow of national socialism and the expiation

Addressing the world on his name's-day, the Pontiff said that the Vatican had concluded the concordat with Germany in 1933 to permit continued Catholic practice and establish a spiritual barrier to the subversive and violent doctrines of Naziism.

In defending the rights of small nations, Pius XII said that though they could be expected to surrender some sovereignty in world cooperation, they must be given full control over their internal affairs. With Europe desolated by the war, the Pope said that dispossessed, disillusioned and hopeless men threatened harmonious relations between the various segments of society.

Largest and most complicated operation of its kind ever attempted in France, the exchange proceeded smoothly following months of the most careful preparation. Armed with carbines, police and troops guarded banks, post offices and tax bureaus in every town, village and hamlet during the exchanges. Only $1, $2, $20 and $100 bank notes were being exchanged, with each holder given a maximum of $120 in cash and the remainder kept until the completion of the whole operation. Lesser notes corresponding to American "change" were not included, leading to a frantic bid on the part of people short of them to obtain some for smaller but all im-overseas reflects the gradual curtailment of lend-lease operations following Germany's defeat, with total food deliveries expected to drop to 2 or 3 per cent of the nation's supply by the end of the year compared with about 7 per cent in 1944. Overall relief shipments will rise 5 to 10 per cent, however, with wheat and flour the major "bulk" foods.

With federally inspected packers unable to keep up with both military and civilian demands, and non-federally inspected slaughterers' production quotas cut, small towns reportedly were beginning to feel the effects of the meat shortage. Except for those with food lockers, many farm wives were said to be taking their turn in line with townsfolk for the dwindling supplies.

Food Sales Show Greatest Wartime Rise

Sales by restaurants, groceries and other food stores in the United States rose from $12,693,000,000 in the prewar year of 1938 to $28,261,-000,000 in 1944, an increase of 122.7 per cent, according to the Alexander Hamilton institute. This was a nitich larger percentage increase than that shown by retail sales of all other commodifies which rose from $25, 360.000.000 to $41,014,000,000.

Half of the gain in total retail trade from $38,053,000,000 in 1938 to the record high figure of $69,275,000,-000 in 1944 was accounted for by the increase in food sales alone. In 1938, food sales represented 33.4 per cent of total retail trade. In 1944, food sales amounted to 40.8 per cent of the total. Reports for the first two months of 1945 show a continuation of the expansion in food sales.

George Stimson, who wrote "A Book About the Bible," is one of Washington's newsmen whose name is known to many readers of his dispatches and his column, especially in the Middle West and South. He is known to a smaller circle for the profundity of his knowledge on many subjects, especially the Bible. I think it more than coincidence that he completed the work to which he has given a lifetime of study and devotion this year. He may have guessed that this period in the world's history which has witnessed the greatest brutalization of humankind would naturally be followed by a strong reaction toward things of the spirit. In any case the arrival of this "Book About the Bible" could not be more timely. Lloyd Douglas, author of that gripping work, "The Robe," informed me last month that the American Bible Society has received the largest order for scriptures in its 129 years of history, and that the distribution of Bibles, New Testaments and Bible portions by this non-profit organization has reached the highest level since it was founded in 1816.

This biggest single order was for 350,000 Protestant scriptures (including military missals and prayer books) for the European theater of operations and in addition 500 German Bibles, 120,000 testaments and 95,000 "portions" for use with German war prisoners and interned ci-

War's Brutalities Bring Reaction

So much for the situation to date. Why is it predicted that this great revival of interest in the holy writ in this country is only the beginning of a movement of world-wide magnitude. First, there is the obvious suggestion already mentioned that it is logical to expect a reaction toward things of the spirit after these years of brutal warfare.

However, there is another answer which is given by many thoughtful people They say this: The defeat of nazi-fascism was the defeat of an idea as well as a military power. That idea based on a purely material concept was opposed and overcome by the western nations whose philosophy of government as well as of morals and ethics is based on the Christian religion.

This triumph of the Christiandemocratic ideal has affected different people for different reasons but with the same general result. To many who yielded to the lure of nazifascism its failure revealed its fundamental error. Their alluring idol showed its feet of clay and they are turning repentingly back to its opposite, Christianity.

To many who have been but passive followers of the Christian teachings, the terrible price the world has paid in blood has been a harsh reminder of their delinquencies. They have a renewed zeal in their faith. To those, of course, who have suffered or are bereft, comfort comes with the contemplation of the scriptures, with their hopeful message. And then there is another explan- himself. ation of this desire to renew and reinforce their communion with the word of God. If I may venture into the realm of the metaphysical let me quote from an anonymous article thority to slash tariffs an additional in a pamphlet entitled "Let Freedom Ring," (also a product of the American Bible society).

THE STORY THUS FAR: Melody Jones and George Fury had ridden into Payneville, Melody mistaken for the outlaw, Monte Jarrad. Monte's girl, Cherry, with George, met Lee, Monte's pardner, as he and Melody were leaving the city. They overpowered-Lee and went to the shack where Monte hid the express money. Luke Packer, the insurance cop, was there and shot by someone outside When Melody returned with the horses they found the sheriff in the cabin but the body gone. They soon found the money hid in wall with the body of Luke. At this point Melody and Cherry were able to make a break and get away. Fury had met up with Monte. He was de termined to take Monte into town.

CHAPTER XV

All expression had left Monte Jarrad's face, except for a clear brightness in his eyes, as in the eyes of a lynx. "Crazy," he murmured, as if talking to himself.

He fired, then. He hardly seemed to go through the motions of a draw at all, the weapon came so smoothly from the tied-down holster at his thigh. All George Fury ever saw was a general galvanizing jerk of Monte Jarrad's whole frame, and instantly the gun blasted in Monte's hand, as if it had been there all the George Fury doubled and pitched forward as if he had been struck in the middle by a swinging log. His gun, which he had somehow grabbed out of its leather, fired only a bare instant after Jarrad's weapon; but it exploded downward, blowing half of the little campfire away; and the recoil almost tore it out of George Fury's slackened hand.

Monte Jarrad reclined motionless, his face impassive, but his eyes awake, watching the man who was down. His gun was cocked and steady. After a moment or two he noticed that George Fury's right hand half covered a living coal from the little fire, but did not draw away. When he saw this, Jarrad let the hammer down, easing it gently.

Morning was leaking out of the far-off Dragonette ranges as Melody Jones drew near the ramshackle ranch house of the Busted Nose. First a dull green illumination appeared in the eastern sky, without in any way lighting the soot-black trail; and as this appeared the redpoppers began to go "zeep" in the brush. After a time this first effort withdrew, so that the night seemed blacker than before; but a muddy grayness was beginning to pervade the ranges, as if seeping up out of the ground. By the time this had increased to full dawn, Mclody was sitting his pony behind a stand of locust, watching the ranch house from a respectful distance of more than four hundred yards.

So far as he could find out he was alone in the world entirely. Even the bear cub had been turned loose. or had worked its way free, from its chain beside the broken screen door. As Melody prospected closer, a late-ranging armadillo trundled around the corner of the house, and disappeared without hurry. Melody was satisfied with that. The animal would have known, better than he could, if anyone were around. He rode to the back stoop of the house without further caution.

After that he walked a little way out from the house, to get away from the sound of the pony's munching, and listened a while longer, very lonely in the dawn; and then made a fire in the stove, with more than necessary thuds and bangs, to he rid of the insufferable quiet.

A hot smell of coffee, smelling ten times better than it would ever taste, began floating down-wind from the Busted Nose. Melody rummaged for something to eat which would take no work to fix.

His back was to the door, and his hands were pawing over a shelf of canned goods, when the kitchen darkened faintly.

His hands faltered, but only for an instant. He went on with what he was doing without looking around, stalling over the labels. Somebody was standing in the doorway. He knew that much, though he had heard no approach. Melody's right hand weighed a can of tomatoes, testing it as a weapon. But he set it down.

Melody turned slowly, empty handed; and, for the first time in his life, faced Monte Jarrad,

"Hi," Melody said. The man in the doorway grunted.
Even if the light had been better, instead of directly behind Jarrad, Melody might not have recog-

"Looking for somebody?" Melody asked this stranger.

Monte Jarrad took in the whole tay-out coolly, the room first, then Melody Jones. Melody saw him notice where the carbine was.
"Just passing by," Jarrad said, watching Jones oddly. His voice had a soft lack of tone to it, very unsettling. "You don't need to be so edgy,"

Melody said. "We don't ask no questions here. Want some coffee?" "I'll get it myself . . . Don't go over there. Don't go any place, Stay against that wall. Back up against it a little closer." He gave these orders casually, not even bothering to look closely at Melody. His wasn't going to be any good. He energies kept wandering around the tirely believed what Monte had said room, checking, and checking, and re-checking.

"Now you looky here!" Melody gun wouldn't get him.

born days." Jarrad's gaze stopped wandering. 'Nor heard of me, neither, I suppose.

"I can't keep knowledge of every grub-testing punk that-" stopped short.

"What's the matter?" Jarrad asked sardonically. Melody looked puzzled. "It come to me for a minute that you might be Monte Jarrad. But you ain't."

"No. This Jarrad weasel looks somethin' like I do-it fools people "It's a hard thing to say about a man.' "Whut?" "When I think of being mistooken for the kind of chuckle-head that you look like to me-it's enough to turn a feller sick."

Melody looked at him with pity. 'Don't let it worry you," he said. 'Nobody ever mistook me for no such limping wreck as you be. It's small wonder you got strucken by lightning, or something, the manners you got. And here's another thing-'

"Well, I'll be damned," said Jarrad.

"And here's another thing. Keep on like you're haiding, and you'll think lightning hit you again!"

The two looked at each other strangely across the kitchen table. "A feller never knows," Monte Jarrad said obscurely, as if to him-

"So you're him," Melody said, as if he couldn't believe it. He stood staring idiotically, as people look at some great mysterious phenomenon they have heard about all their lives. "It's a hell of a disappointment," he said at last.

"Take off your boots," Jarrad ordered.

Slowly Melody unbuckled his spur straps. "It beats me," he said, "what she sees in you, Jarrad." "I'll take your belt; and your hat; and whatever trash is in them pockets. I suppose that bone pile out there with my saddle on it—you call that your horse . . ." "And that carbine you slung out in the dirt was your carbine!" "You can have it now. We'll get your own saddle on that old hide, You can have mine."

"This won't do you no good," Melody told him. "Even if we swap every stitch we own, there still won't be any scar on my bean." "No," Monte, admitted, "No; there never will be. But I suppose there can still be the place where one was . ." When the meaning of this soaked in on Melody he studied Monte Jar-rad for a long time. "You got clammy idees," he said at last, without much assurance. "I'd ruther be daid than in your place."

"You can have both," Jarrad said. Jones obeyed as Monte Jarrad swapped boots, hat and equipment with him; and finally switched his own old worn hull to Harry Henshaw. After that was done Melody was kept standing against the wall of the kitchen while Jarrad, onehanded, drank his coffee.

There was still something Monte wanted to know; but he didn't know how to get at it. Some very peculiar things were running in Melody's mind just then. He knew he was going to make some kind of a play; and he knew it -that he might knock Monte out, but not fast enough so that Monte's

THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1945

America's shortage of gasoline for civilian use is becoming actually acute, especially in the East where light fuel for oil-heated homes was a serious problem all winter. War's motor fuel demands are increasing, and the only apparent way to meet them is by deeper cuts into uses at home. In 1943, oil fields of the United States yielded 1.5 billion barrels of crude oil, and new fields discovered will furnish only about onesixth that much.

No relief is in sight; 350,000 barrels daily came out of storage tanks in January, 1944. Oil producers started more than two years ago to warn government authorities of just what is happening now. Then, and for several months later the calamity could have been avoided with a fair increase in the crude oil price, but it was not allowed. Here is the rub: When oil prices were frozen in 1941, the national average was $1.17 a barrel, and now it is $1.20.

Books Show Red Counting all puny, scattered price advances in two years, the gain has amounted to 3 cents a barrel while costs to get oil are up 60 cents a barrel. The country needed oil even in 1941. Exploratory wells should have been drilled-new fields found. But men can't spend more than they receive: Owners of small wells could have boosted the yield from many of these with sound engineering methods but the money was lacking. Many wells have been shut down.

The argument offered against a higher oil price ceiling is that it would make car owners pay more for gasoline. They would gladly pay more, however, if they could get the gasoline. Meanwhile old oil fields are dying by inches. More than 13,000 little oil wells were junked last year because they couldn't be made to pay; 10,000 perished the year before. This should never happen when our flyers need motor fuel,

We Fight Success It probably delights our enemies to sec small, successful, private enterprisers squeezed out of the oil business while the government buys into it with taxpayers' money. It is a trend fundamentally wrong and, right now, dangerous. Up near the Arctic Circle, on Canadian soil, our government has put 135 million dollars in a pipeline and refinery within the last two years. Its practicability is now gravely questioned, even as a peacetime venture. Some say work on it was abandoned, for the long Arctic winter. The latest government mirage of far-flung oil wealth is on the sands of Arabia. People in a position to know estimate its cost at 150 million dollars. Two years may see it finished. Two years will see the European war over, experts believe, so the Arabian pipeline is no part of the war effort.

It's No Secret Congressman H. L. Gavin of Pennsylvania, ably and eloquently told this story in a radio talk on February 14. He had his facts and figures straight. He is probably right that there is plenty of petroleum still un-der ground in America. I'd like to see oil fields developed at home, near to our aching need for gasoline and heating oil. Legislation to this effect should be enacted by Congress if action is not obtained other-

Question-What is the greatest commandment God ever gave to Answer - Matthew 22:36-38: Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment." Q.-Who was the first man to live in a tent? A .- As far as the record goes, it was Jabal. [Genesis 4:20.]

Q .- Does the Book say anything about eating blood?

A .- Genesis 9:4: "But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not cat." See Leviticus 17:10-14; Acts 15:28, 29.

Q.—Can you prove from the Bible that there is to be more than one resurrection?

A .- "Marvel not at this: for the herr is coming, in the which all that rie in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have one evil, unto the resurrection of an action. John 5:28, 29.
C. Did folks say "Hello" and

'Good-by" in Bible times? A. Some Bible salutations are:

"Peace be with thee." Judges 19: co. "The Lord be with you." Ruth "The Lord bless thee." Ruth "God be gracious unto thee." Genesis 43:29. "Art thou in health?" 2 Samuel 20:9. "Hail!" Matthew 26:49. "All hail!" Matthew 28:9. Our good-by is a form of "God be with you."

Q.-Do you think a man is more' likely to be saved if he gives lots of money to the church?

A .- A truly converted man will' bring gifts for God's cause, not in order to be saved, but because he has been saved. No man can bribe God with worldly wealth or even! with a human sacrifice. "He hath! shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of wasn't any furlough but finally was thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Micah 6:8. Those who do good out of a loving heart ard abundantly blessed. In Matthew 25:40-46 we read that the givers had forgotten they had ever given rally ended and was waiting patient-anything.

Ed. Note: Address your questions to the BIBLE QUESTION COLUMN, The Voice of Prophecy, Box 55, Los Angeles 53, Calif. Bible questions of genigles for interest will be answered in this column as space permits.

Mind if we boast a bit about our old policy of providing electricity at low cost? Because now, new lowered CMP rates will reduce the monthly bills of most of our farm and residential customers anywhere from $1.20 to $3 per year! Not very much-but something.

That means, of course, that if you use the same amount of electricity you've been using, your bill will be less; or you can use a little more than usual at slight additional cost. This should lighten your heart as well as your housework!

The unfaithful wife of the a familiar theme. In this artisituation is considered. Carol

Brown loves her husband and her children, and wants noth-

Carol was so lonely and misersolace she could from friends.

Before she was really aware of it, she was seeing a man named

Morgan, an artist like herself,

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

AROL BROWN is 31, beautiful, affectionate, mother of two small boys. When Fred Brown went away to war two years ago she suffered all the pangs of loneliness, fear, grief that any woman could know. She wrote him loyally, and after two years she writes him still. Carol is not a sociable woman. She studied painting for many years, works hard at her art still, fills her time with her books, garden, studio hours and children.

About a year ago she had a friendship with a painter we might call Morgan. Morgan had a charming artistic place about 30 miles away from Carol's town, and presently Carol and the children began to spend week-ends there. Other artists, writers, newspaper folk did also, and for some months, she writes me, everything was open and aboveboard. Then she and Morgan became lovers.

But Morgan evidently, however much a lover, is canny, too. When Fred Brown wrote that he was coming home, minus a leg, Morgan got married. He married a young and dashing newspaper woman and at 41 has apparently settled down.

"Fred was so far away, and everything that belonged to our old happy life was so completely changed, that I think I lost my bearings," says her letter. "The crowd that went to Morgan's is naturally a rather free-thinking crowd, and they accepted our relationship without any question. Husband Is Devoted.

"My problem is this. I love my husband, and to think of his coming home crippled breaks my heart, for Fred was a great walker and loved nothing so much as country outings with me and the children. My one wish is to compensate him for all that he has been through. He is a most affectionate man, passionately devoted to me and to the boys.

"Shall I tell him honestly all that has occurred? If I do, it must be immediately, for putting it off will infinitely complicate matters. He may resent it deeply; he may wish to avenge it by a divorce and the separation of me and my sons. His older sister is devoted to the boys, she has but one child, a half-grown girl; she would be delighted to add boys of 5 and 7 to her family, and have Fred all to he self.

Far wiser to simply and regretfullive with that sword of Damocles ly tell him the truth. Tell him that it was the result of association with hanging over my head from day to day. It does not seem just to me persons who had themselves no parthat for a few months of indiscreticular respect for conventions, that tion, which never meant to me what it is all over, and Morgan married. any week of the long happy years Ask him to think of the boys, of with Fred has meant, should cost me so dear. I may say that my mother takes any action. He'll decide upon forgiveness. For a long while things won't be not like Morgan's crowd, that crowd the same, of course. But after while is many miles away, and they have happiness will come back. Loving consideration for him, wisdom in handling the boys, clever management of your affairs will all help, Please advise me of the simplest and human hearts being as mutable course that will mean happiness and as they are, time will work its usual security for us all."

But it would be wonderful if lonely service wives could see some statistics upon the outcome of illicit love affairs, hasty divorces, disruption of homes and scattering children. Perhaps one reason why all the books on morality preach fidelity and self-control is because they are the only secret of successful and happy marriage.

RIGHT WAY TO COOK EGGS Unless eggs are properly cooked, they lose some of their food value and flavor. So-called "boiled eggs" are best cooked below boiling. Use one pint of almost boiling water for each egg, put the eggs in the water, cover, and set the pan in a warm place where the temperature will fall slowly. Keep the eggs in this water for from five to six minutes for soft-cooked eggs. Allow about 45 minutes for hard-cooked ones, ther drop them in cold water. For over cooking, use between 250 and 300 F.

Hopper:

WHAT a heritage for Rita Hayworth's baby! Everybody knows, of course, that little Rebecca's mother is one of the most successful and most popular of all our feminine stars, and that her father, Orson Welles is a remarkable young man (too remarkable sometimes!) in many fields-writing, acting, producing. But Rebecca's heritage is a matter of generations famous in the theater.

That baby's great-grandfather on the distaff side is the great Antonio Cansino, one of the famous dancers of all time. The story of his life and of the 16 children he begot, and of his grandchildren, is one of the fascinating sagas of the theater.

Nearly 70 years ago a 12-year-old boy was left an orphan in a little Spanish village. His father had been a well-to-do land owner; but there were crooked lawyers in Spain even then, as everywhere else, and the boy found himself done out of his inheritance and left penniless to face the world. That boy was Anonio Cansino.

Out on His Own

Antonio set out for Seville, and there he found himself a job as helper to a blacksmith. Little Antonio liked to dance, and to play the guitar. When night came Antonio struck out for the water front cafes, and there he danced again-for pen-

At that time the famous Imperia and her rival, La Companara, were having their heyday, and there was a popular male dancer, Fer-Feliz. Young Antonio nando sneaked into the wings to watch their performances and in time made their acquaintance. He had an ingratiating manner, and before long he was having lessons from all

Starting Up the Ladder

So at 15 Antonio said goodby to his forge. A theater manager had seen him dance and had recognized a rising star. Within a year Antonio was famous throughout Spain. He had a house of his own, servants and a carriage. At 17 he married. At 18 he was a father.

A London producer happened to be visiting Spain and watched Antonio Cansino at a performance in Madrid. He offered a contract for a month's engagement in London at a figure that couldn't be turned down The month was extended to a year and by that time Antonio was reap ing a fortune. Paris followed and then tours of Europe and South

As the Cansino fortune grew, the family was growing, too. At the age of 35 Anionio had no less than 10 children. He was rich and his wife and children wanted him at home. To the chagrin of theatrical managers, he announced his retirement from the stage.

Never Too Young

All of the Cansino children were taught to dance by their father almost as soon as they could walk. Young dancers begged Cansino for instruction, so he opened a school in Madrid. When Diaghiley took the preciate the boys' position, he will see that they have rights, that it is Ballet Russe to the Spanish capital all-important to keep the surface several of the stars took lessons from Cansino, among them Leon-Ordinarily I would advise secrecy.

moment, after Fred had been happily restored to his family, and California, Here We Come When Rita was 16 she came to California with her parents, the Edouardo Cansinos. The movie bug got her, but good. She danced and played bit parts in dozens of pictures, and then came her big chance in "Blood and Sand," opposite Tyrone Power. You know the rest of Carol's own love for him, before he that story. Her father and mother have been retired from the stage for some years, and Rita's father is now working at Douglas because he has two sons at the front.

And now the first Antonio, the patriarch of them all, is here. He lost house and fortune during the Spanish revolution.

And do you know what he's looking forward to? You guessed it-it's the day when little Rebecca is big enough to take her first dancing lesson from her great-granddaddy. Did I say that baby has a heri-

And did I say there's a movie in the histoire Cansino? All right, I leave it to you - and to the first smart producer that gets the same idea.

And Why Not?

Long, Hard War Planned Against Japan by Allies

Aid of Russia Still an Open Question as to Effect on China

> By Walter A. Shead WNU Staff Correspondent.

Editor's Note: This is the last of three articles dealing with the all-out war to be waged against Japan, and problems that must be met before peace can be established.

How the United States can maintain control over military bases in the Pacific and elsewhere without getting off an international land-grab in the peace settlement, is the subject of much discussion.

These military bases include the Marshall Islands, the Marianas, the Carolines, the Bonin and Volcano groups, all of which were mandated to Japan after World War I. It also likely would include the Gilbert Islands, perhaps bases in the Solomons and elsewhere in the South Pacific, Palau Islands, and also perhaps at Dakar on the west African coast and in Greenland.

Under the principles established in the Atlantic charter we are not land-grabbing for territory but we have taken the position that strategic areas should be regarded separately from colonial areas. With this in mind, the late President Roosevelt apparently made commitments that this country would not ask title to islands claimed by us for

Bill Was Just Survivin' And Doing Good Job of It

The offhand quality of the Negro serviceman's courage is neatly summed up in an incident re-ported by a fellow who participat-ed in the second battle of the Philippines, last fall. His ship, the Korea will be made to forge this crew of the Princeton after she went down, among them a Negro mess attendant.

The rescued man was sitting in the wardroom pantry, dripping and drinking coffee, when an old friend of his happened by,
"Why, it's Bill!" the friend exclaimed. "What you doing here?"

Bill's answer was precise and modest. "Ah's survivin'," he said.

a nine foot beam and will be driven by an 80 b p Diesel Lothrop'engine, was carried over the state road to Bingham—thence through a 15- mile woods road to Spencer Lake.

When the ice is out, she will be launched; and she will be used to to tow logs across the lake to Spencer stream. They will be driven down this stream to the Dead River time we arrived at Berhar, to where we are now, our mission was firing at Fuzz Bombs. Our Battery is credited with 97 of them. It is a thrill of a life time to see them explode in the air, but not so much fun if they are just crippled and start falling anywhere near the follows they make and believe me, they are big ones.

to tow logs across the lake to Spencer stream. They will be driven down this stream to the Dead River and thence to the Hollingsworth & Wlittney Mills at Waterville on the Kennebee—a continuous waterway. No overland haul therefore, is necessary.

The Hollingsworth & Whitney Company expects to cut about 14,000 cords in the Spencer Lake region. The woods operations have been by German prisoners of war at the Spencer Lake, which is, of course under government control. The number of these prisoners at military secret. A representative of the company, who was in Orono yesterday, estimated they may have averaged seven tenths of a cord per man a day. This is less than half what experienced woodsmen would cut; but or the other hand, it is more than is any expected.

Cutting pulpwood calls for years of training. It isn't something to be learned overnight. Everything considered those prisoners are believed.
